Invitation to EFT Research Meeting

Dear EFT Professional,

Thank you for your interest in EFT and the healthcare system. There are many health professionals all over the world using EFT in primary care: physicians, nurses, psychologists, social workers, and others and there needs to be more. The acceptance of EFT in conventional primary care settings has been limited due to the lack of a strong base of evidence for EFTs effectiveness, especially the scarcity of RCTs or Randomized Controlled Trails.

I am personally committed to seeing EFT play a leading role in primary care in the coming generation. Not just for treating psychological problems such as phobias, depression, and anxiety, at which it excels but also for medical conditions. There is ample scientific evidence that resolving emotional trauma speeds wound healing, boosts immunity, reduces shock, ameliorates aging, reduces pain, promotes cell regeneration, and lowers stress hormones such as cortisol and adrenaline.

For this reason I have helped initiate 20 energy psychology studies in the past two years through the nonprofit Soul Medicine Institute, and I am currently conducting the largest RCT of EFT ever attempted, a nationwide study of US war veterans with PTSD. One of my pilot studies, recently published in a peer-reviewed journal, has made its way to the highest levels of the cabinet of President Barak Obama for investigation as a possible treatment for PTSD.

I will be visiting the UK and Europe in May and June, and I would like to invite you to a scientific meeting to share information, insights, and details of these exciting projects. I would like to hear your clinical insights, find out what obstacles you're facing in your professional life, discover how and if you're measuring EFTs effectiveness statistically, and also share ideas from others who face these same challenges. I anticipate that this will be a highly collaborative and cordial exchange.

This scientific meeting will take the form of a dinner and post-dinner meeting on Friday May 29th at 6pm at Craiglands Hotel, Ilkley, West Yorkshire. There is no charge for this evening meeting, aside from the cost of your meal. If you RSVP, to dawson@authorspublishing.com I will send you a list of studies now underway, so that you have a sense of current research targets.

The following day, Saturday May 30th, I will present a weekend workshop on the science behind EFT, and on Sunday, its application to relationships. These are also held at Craiglands. Full information about the weekend, directions and accommodation options can be found at www.eftevents.com/science.htm. I would appreciate your encouraging anyone looking for a high-energy, fast-paced, compassionate, and deeply transformative experience of energy psychology to attend.

I appreciate your considering this invitation, and I hope to see you there!

With best wishes,

Dawson Church
